Statement I

Name of the programme: Zile Ki Sabse Hari Panchayat

Green cover in the country is very crucial for sustainable land use and water recharge. Trees also provide for constructional timber, fuelwood, fodder, medicines and many item of domestic use for the rural population. Indirectly, trees also affect agriculture production, animal husbandry, drinking water and many other aspects.

The following is suggested:—

I. Aim

To encourage Panchayats to take up large scale tree planting on all available non-agricultural lands.

II. Concept

With the 73rd Constitutional Amendment, tree plantation is a major responsibility of panchayats. Funds are made available to the panchayats for such activity, but it is found that in recent years plantation has not been given adequate emphasis by them. In order to encourage more tree plantation it is proposed to institute an award for the Panchayats that make the best afforestation effort in each district of the country. All panchayats of the country are eligible for this award. Panchayats will submit details of plantation works done by them in the period 1996-2000. These will be got verified appropriately. The Panchayat that has done the best work will be selected for the award as per the procedure established by the state government.

III. Eligibility

All panchayats of the lowest tier (and equivalent bodies where these exist in lieu of panchayats)

IV. Conditions

(a) Trees will be planted on community or public (all lands which are other than private lands) lands within the jurisdiction of the Panchayat. These may be roadside, canal side, railway embankments, block plantations etc.

(b) Pasture development will not be considered.

(c) 750 Trees planted will be considred as equivalent to afforestation of 1 ha. land area. The minimum area to be covered will be 10 ha. (notionaly) in 4 years.

V. Mode of Operation

(a) Scheme announced on 14th November 1995.

(b) Panchayats inform the concerned District level Forest Official of their work with substantiating documents by end of September, 1999.

(c) Scrutiny and selection of the Panchayat with best afforestation effort in each district by end of October, 1999.

(d) State Governments inform Ministry of Environment and Forests of the best Panchayats by end of November, 1999.

(e) Announcement/Presentation of Awards on 4th January, 2000. (The day is significant as the Ministry of Environment & Forest was established on this day in 1995).

VI. Award/Prize

The best Panchayat in each district will get as cash prize of Rs. 1.00 lakh.
